The Danforth Museum of Art in Framingham, Mass., has been enriching the lives of local residents, young and old, for more than thirty years. As a museum benefactor, Bernardi Toyota does its part to guarantee that the cultural institution will remain an integral feature of the community far into the future.

"Our owner, Jim Carney, and the rest of the team like to give back to the people who are our customers, our neighbors," says Bernardi Toyota Trustee Amy Rossi. "We think that relationship is worth preserving."

The Danforth Museum of Art provides art education to 63 public and private schools from 17 surrounding communities, sponsoring free, after-school art enrichment programs for underserved children. The Museum School offers hands-on classes in photography, drawing, painting, weaving and ceramics for children and adults. This spring, Bernardi Toyota sponsored Over the Moon, a gala fund-raising event to support the expansion of such programming. The dealership also took a leading role in the museum's annual membership drive.

"Bernardi Toyota is very community-minded," says Museum Director Katherine French. "They've allowed us to create and offer programming we wouldn't have been able to do otherwise. The dealership has helped us go places we simply wouldn't have been able to go without its support."
